GALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, APRIL 12, 1917

Congress has declared war against Germany. This country is now engaged in the greatest war of all times. Every intelligent man takes a comprehensive view of the world-wide war, but his duty lies in his immediate neighborhood. It is to discuss the duty of the citizen that we attempt to advance a few thoughts on the subject.

At this time the most that we can do for our country is to see that the neighborhood in which we live is loyal to the nation, in thought, word and deed, and if we find any sore places to do what we can to get the community in a healthy condition. We are proud of the fact that in the territory embraced in our horizon there is not the least sign of disloyalty to the United States, and that every man is ready to do his duty.

During the ferment there may have been some bellyaching around by loose tongued men who have no awe for the tremendous forces of war, but if there were such, they have certainly accepted the mandate of the government, and are now ready to defend the right.

In the great Civil War, this county occupied a peculiar position. No sooner had the conflict broken out than both the great powers converged upon Pocahontas, under the general order to guard the passes in the Alleghenies. This country was harried and harassed during the whole four years of that mighty struggle, and the devastation of Belgium had not yet been so complete as that of the Valley counties just east of us. In the present war, we are happily removed from the scene of the conflict. Our mountains that brought the armies here within a few days after war was declared, constitute a barrier and a protection, even though the country was invaded, and no one expects to see this country invaded in the present struggle.

Be ready:
To go anywhere that you have orders to go.

To do anything that the powers that be require of you.

To give up any part of your means that is considered necessary by the powers that be to bear the expenses of the campaign. Sometimes to gain all, we must risk all.

Be diligent:
To produce wealth to support the nation throughout the war. Plant more. Work more. "He who plants a tree, or trains a flower, or sows a field, is more than all."

To bridle the tongue if inclined to criticize that which you do not fully understand and thus embarrass the government.

To keep down and discourage seditious utterances in others.

To inculcate in the hearts of the young the blessings of a free country. Freedom is now menaced as never before.

To let every man who is called to the front, know before he leaves that his family and affairs will receive the most careful and considerate attention while he is away on the nation's business.

Our motto:
"Let our object be, our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country."

It must be a source of the greatest gratification to every American to know that the country is united in this hour of peril. That the spirit of our heroic ancestry still animates and guides us, and that we are as ready as ever to stand up and fight for the right.

It may be a comparatively privileged few who will have the distinction of wearing the uniform of the United States in this conflict, but it is all the more reason that we should so make our loyalty shine before men, that it will not require the color of the clothing to impress the world that we are Americans, first, last, and all the time.

A strong pull, and a long pull, and a pull all together, and then victory and peace.

"To reap the harvest of perpetual peace. By this one bloody trial of sharp war."

As for the rulers of Germany, the time is coming when they will be ready to cry out for the mountains to fall upon them, and they already hear what they call Das Hohngelächter der Hölle—the mocking laughter of Hell.

William Jennings Bryan has asked the President to enroll him as a private in the war. Theodore Roosevelt has also tendered his services to his country. This is a modern version of the lion and the lamb associating with each other.

It seems that we can show Germany better than we can tell her what strict accountability means.

"No more shall Peace Pipe on her pastoral hill a languid note,
And watch her harvest ripen."

Lafollette is about as popular as the small-pox.

Like the Lion of the Tribe of Judah, President Wilson may be the one who is to prevail to open the purple testament of bleeding war, and loose the seven seals thereof.

America's entrance into the war is a circumstance over which Germany seems to have lost control.

If all the effigies of Lafollette which have been burned in the last few weeks had been heaped together, it would have made a prodigious fire.

The course of Lafollette—and the folly of it.

Even the brokers are standing like a stone wall by the government.

The Gavia Immer, oh U Bird, came floating down the river toward the concrete bridge last Sunday evening, with only the periscope showing. She was floating with the tide, and was trying to slip through town in a quiet and unostentatious manner. Evidently this great northern diver was a retiring country bird and not the kind that we see here sometimes that likes to play hide and seek with a gentleman with a shot gun. No part of her ample body showed. As soon as she saw that she was observed she submerged and appeared in a few moments near a hundred yards up stream, and then poked her periscope out of the water for no more than a fraction of a second and dived and peeped five times by which time she could barely be seen near the Island.

This bird is about a yard long and they are seen here in winter and spring. It is pretty late for them. They are called loons here and are our best divers. The note is a loud quavering, drawn-out "wah-hoo-o-o." We think we have heard them but are not sure as we did not see the bird when it was making the sound. We have a very poor ear for bird notes—in fact any music.

It has as wide a range as a New York society woman. It adopts the line between Canada and the United States. It summers above the line and winters below the line.

God's ways seem dark, but soon or late,

They touch the shining hills of day;
The evil cannot brook delay.

The good can well afford to wait.
Give ermined knaves their hour of crime;

Ye have the future grand and great,
The safe appeal of Truth and Time!

—Whittier.

If you want peace, the thing you've got to do

Is jes' to show you're up to fightin' 'em.

—James Russell Lowell.

The young boy at school was asked to write a certain sort of a sentence, we forget what you call it in the grammar, and he produced the following: "There is going to be fightin'." The teacher pointed out to him that he had forgotten the "g." So he wrote, "Gee, there is going to be fightin'."

We may receive wounds in this war. That is all in the days work. Like a Mrs. Murphy who went to call on some old maids. Mrs. Murphy had a black-eye. The maiden lady asked: "What is the matter Mrs. Murphy?" Then realizing that she might have asked a tactless question, she hastily turned it off, by saying, "Well, cheer up, you might be worse off." Sure and I might," responded the indignant Mrs. Murphy. "I might not be married at all!"

At St. Albans, in Kanawha County, the other day, the young men got together and made an effigy of Senator La Follette and after the usual ceremonies burned it. The papers contain many notices of this attention to this unfortunate senator in different parts of the country. The general feeling throughout the United States is that this senator has insisted upon his opposition to the known will of the people to such an extent that he has conveyed to Germany the false impression that this country is divided against itself, and in this way prevented the continuance of peace, and encouraged Germany to persist in the murderous acts that have brought on the war. La Follette is an Indian of the Chautauqua tribe, a race that thoroughly believes in advertising, but knows generally how far to go. This senator seems to have pressed down a little too hard on the greasy string.

In latin countries, Judas is hung in effigy every year with great demonstrations of hate and ferocity. In America for many years after the Revolution, a part of the Fourth of July ceremonies was the hanging of an effigy of Benedict Arnold. He was represented by a two faced figure. In England, on November 5th, for a great many years they burned and hung Guy Fawkes who attempted to blow up the parliament in 1605. Later they turned this impotent attention to Admiral Byng, who was convicted of cowardice and incapacity in the engagement with the French fleet of Minorca, in which he was charged with not having supported Admiral West in his bold attack on the fleet. This was Admiral John Byng, son of Admiral George Byng. John Byng was shot as a result of the court martial, though he was convicted only of incapacity and recommended for mercy. The favorite inscription on a Byng effigy was: "This is the villain that would not fight."

In France for many years if a person was condemned to death and escaped from the officers, the law was that a figure should be made up to represent the fugitive from justice, and this figure would be executed in place of the convict. In 1639, the Duke of La Fayette was condemned to death and escaped, and on the date set for his execution, effigies were headed in three cities, Paris, Bordeaux, and Bayonne, respectively. This law was repealed at the Revolution.

The custom is handed down from the middle ages when it was supposed that the individual whose effigy was offered up for sacrifice, would suffer pain or death in his own proper person as a result. Theoretic speaks of it as ancient Greek sorcery.

Many noble men have been burned in effigy by their enemies, notably Cromwell and LaFayette. LaFollette is not to be extolled for standing still. The custom of hanging or burning him in effigy is a barbarous thing, but when you come to think of it, it is just the ordeal for a Chautauqua Indian. Thus the hero endures the flame with that stoic fortitude that is an attribute to members of his tribe, who consider that it is better to be dead than not to be talked about. But they say that you can choke a cat, with cream, and LaFollette has an overdose of advertising, from which he is not expected to recover.

MOTHER TELLS HOW VINOL Made Her Delicate Boy Strong

New York City.—"My little boy was in a very weak, delicate condition as a result of gastritis and the measles, and there seemed no hope of saving his life. The doctor prescribed cod liver oil, but he could not take it. I decided to try Vinol—and with splendid results. It seemed to agree with him so that now he is a strong healthy boy.—Mrs. THOMAS FITZGERALD, 1090 Park Ave., N. Y. City.

We guarantee Vinol, which contains leaf and cod liver peptones, iron, and manganese peptones and glycerophosphates, for run-down conditions.

STATE NEWS

The Monongahela Valley Traction Company, Clarksburg, announced the opening of a school for women motor-men and conductors.

Two men were killed and three injured when the packet Tell Collid with a lock wall at Dam No. 19 in the Ohio River at Little Hocking near Parkersburg, and sank. The dead were Henry Perry, of Parkersburg, and Joe Zabray, of Pittsburgh.

Governor Cornwell issued a statement calling upon the people of West Virginia to respect the authority of the military and to co-operate with the soldiers in protecting life and property, now that both regiments have been called out.

Over 200 members of the West Virginia University regiment of cadets volunteered to enter the services of the nation. The call for volunteers was made in an informal way but the response was quick, one entire company of the corps volunteering as a unit.

With the exception of Senator Nathan Goff, whose physical condition precludes his attendance in the Senate, all the members of the West Virginia delegation in Congress gave their full support to President Wilson in his request for the passage of the war resolution.

The McDowell county bond issue of $1,365,000 was sold last week. The state, through the workman's compensation department, took $370,000 of the issue at par. The remainder was bid in jointly by Cincinnati brokers, who paid a premium of $3,900 for the $1,015,000.

Fayette county will probably furnish a company of negro soldiers if a call for volunteers in this state is made. A full regiment of colored troops is being considered by the adjutant in response to numerous requests from enthusiastic colored patriots of the coal fields.

In view of the war crisis it is expected that the annual meeting of the Conference of State and Provisional Boards of Health of North America, of which Dr. S. L. Jepson, state health commissioner, is a vice president, will meet early next month in Washington, instead of the first week in June as originally planned.

The third municipal election to be held at Parkersburg under the commission form of government resulted in the present Mayor, A. C. Murdock, running for the third time, being defeated by J. Loal Gilbert by a majority of 983. The four new Commissioners elected were C. W. Boso, W. H. Cecil, James Devoe and Floyd Simpson.

Department Commander J. T. Pligott in response to his letter to President Wilson, pledging the support of the Grand Army of the Republic of West Virginia, received a card which follows: "The President deeply appreciates your generous and patriotic offer of your services and he wishes in this informal way to express his grateful thanks."

Henry Grady Webb, charged with having been a member of the gang which held up and robbed an express train on the B. & O. Railroad near Central Station, on October 9, 1915, and escaped with $100,000 in unsigned currency, pleaded guilty in the United States District Court at Martinsburg. He was sentenced to serve 25 years in Atlanta penitentiary.

The suit of Charles H. Harper, a farmer, of Jefferson County, against his brother, Joseph W. Harper, a well-to-do resident of Oklahoma, on trial in the Federal Court at Martinsburg, in which one brother asked $16,000 from the other for the alleged alienation of the affections of his wife, came to a close when the jury awarded the plaintiff $5,500 damages.

Athletic contests at West Virginia University, at Morgantown, will be discontinued on account of the war. More than 600 students at the university are taking military training, which will be substituted for athletics. Spring football practice was dropped and it is expected that announcement of the cancelling of all baseball games will be made within a few days.

A new wage scale, which increased the pay of 2,500 soft coal miners in the Cabin Creek district from approximately 13 to 27 1/2 per cent over the old agreement, has gone into effect. The operators in the agreement refused to grant the men's demands for an open shop. Fifteen thousand soft coal miners throughout Eastern Ohio celebrated the anniversary of the enactment of the eight-hour day law.

Editor Braithwaite of the Peninsula News makes a statement that if some of the readers of his paper object to paying the new rate of $1.50 per year for his paper, that he will accept seven dozen of eggs, three bushels of corn or three bushels of potatoes in exchange for a year's subscription, as was customary several years ago when the price of the paper was established at $1 per year.

The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Fairmont State Normal School was observed at Fairmont in connection with the formal dedication of the new building that was recently completed and occupied. Among the prominent educators taking part were Chancellor Charles B. McCormick, of the University of Pittsburgh; Dr. A. E. Winship, of Boston, and Dr. G. D. Strayer, of Columbia University.

A wild turkey hen is a determined creature when it comes to raising a family each year. They have been known to travel as far as twenty miles to find a mate. If the nest is broken up they will lay several settings of eggs. During wet weather and in the early dewy morning, the mother hen boxes her chicks so that they will not get their feet wet. The wild turkey knows not to dig her young about in the wet, but the domesticated turkey will lose her whole family in a day. Hawks, owls, foxes, wildcats, weasels and minks are the main enemies of young wild turkeys, they being entirely free from the many diseases domesticated turkeys are heir to. Fire, hogs and foxes and wild cats are the bane of the nesting turkeys.

Five thousand people literally fought their way into the Market Auditorium, while as many more crowded about the entrances, in the greatest patriotic demonstration Wheeling has ever seen.

An unidentified body was found floating in the Ohio River near Wheeling.

The name of "O. W. Johnson" engraved in the case of a gold watch is the only thing—upon which Coroner R. G. Hobbs has to seek his identity. The body seems to be that of a white man, but it is so badly decomposed that it is impossible to distinguish any features or markings. It is impossible even to determine the age.

Huntington Germans are demonstrating their loyalty to the American flag. The Fesemelm Packing Company was the scene of one of these demonstrations. When the impression was circulated that several Germans in the skinning department of the plant were pro-German in sentiments, the worksman procured a score or more of flags and placed them throughout the plant and the Teutons saluted the colors, to prove their attitude.

The town of Broad Oaks took time by the forelock and beat Congress to it. Its own town council recognized the existence of a state of war between the United States and Germany and Mayor Joe N. Craddock declares that an actual declaration was made, but in view of the fact that rules of censorship have been made by the Federal Government he deemed it unwise to make public the text of the declaration before Congress had acted.

The West Virginia Public Service Commission in a decision made public refused to permit the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad to increase its intrastate passenger rates from 2 cents a mile as now provided by law to 2 1/2 cents. A similar application has been filed by the Baltimore & Ohio Railway with the commission, but until the examination of the company's books in order to verify exhibits filed with the commission has been completed, no decision will be rendered.

Reports from all mining fields of the state indicate unprecedented activity among the miners in planting gardens, this year. Ground is furnished rent free by the companies, and at many places horses or mules for plowing as well. The high prices of things to eat, together with the non-working days at the mines, due to failure of the railroads to furnish cars, will cause thousands of gardens to be planted this year where there were only hundreds in the past.

As a result of the war it is generally predicted that when the State Legislature is assembled in extraordinary session Governor Cornwell will experience but little difficulty in securing the co-operation of the two Houses of the law-making body, which differ in political complexion, in any matters that are of vital importance to the state. In addition to the enactment of the appropriation bills the Legislature may be called upon to pass legislation to strengthen the state in dealing with any situation that might arise as a result of the war.

Despite the higher prices offered under contracts, a large number of coal operators in the Clarksburg and Fairmont mining region have decided not to make contracts for their output the coming year, but will handle it in the open market. The stand of the operators will cause considerable inconvenience among many large consumers of coal, who usually contract in April for their needs for the year and who are experiencing much difficulty in making new coal contracts. The operators believe by staying in the open market they will reap the advantages of further advances in prices.

In the Federal Court at Martinsburg the suit of the Pennsylvania Steel Company against the Washington and Berkeley Bridge Company, which operated the bridge over the Potomac River at Williamsport, was brought to a close, the jury returning a verdict in favor of the steel company for $18,600.50. The suit grew out of the collapse of a pier during the construction of the bridge, four men being killed and several injured. The claims of the accident recovered $20,000 damages from the steel company, and this company sued the bridge company for reimbursement under its contract.
